Will Congress Pass A Late-Term Abortion Ban?

What shameful distinction does the United States share with North Korea, Vietnam, China, Canada, the Netherlands and Singapore?

It's one of only seven countries to allow abortion after the 20th week of pregnancy.

If you would like to see the U.S. removed from this list, now is your chance!

Last year, the U.S. House of Representatives passed the “Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act.” It would make most abortions illegal after the 20th week of pregnancy, which is the point in fetal development that a preborn can likely experience pain.

The bill is now pending in the Senate.

Why Is This Bill Important?

As many as 25,000 preborn babies are aborted after the 20th week of pregnancy each year in the U.S. This bill would prohibit the majority of these abortions, sparing precious lives!

According to medical evidence, there is a strong possibility that preborn children are able to experience pain by at least the 20th week of pregnancy.

- The latest research indicates that preborn babies react to painful stimuli in various measurable ways in the womb
- Abortions at this point in the pregnancy are usually committed by dismembering the preborn baby in the uterus
- This would also save the lives of preborn children singled out for abortion because of a disability or birth defect

What Can You Do?

Contact your two U.S. senators and ask them to vote for the “Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act” (S.2311).

Call the Capitol Switchboard at (202) 224-3121, or locate your members' contact information at Senate.gov.

The vote is expected Monday, Jan. 29, so time is of the essence.

Your call could make the difference, so please contact your two senators today!
